

What Is an Exhibition?

An exhibition is a presentation of artwork focused on a main idea. To create an exhibition, curators, who are experts on art and history, first come up with a great idea for a story they would like to share with others. The story can be about an artist's life and work, a period of history, or it can be a big idea such as portraits throughout time. Curators create a list of all of the objects that they want to include in the exhibition. Then, they decide on how to place the objects in the museum to best tell their story.

It's your turn to be a curator. Select the artworks you would like to place in the galleries and create a title for your exhibition.

Arrange your artworks in the empty gallery.
